Author: Unknown

Date: 2018

He says to Mr Aaron. Peter Coupe, he who wins at the time must be the winner. Employed and by the Harbour Construction it was the manager and not he who went into this darkest night.

For he loved the Mint of NZ and stroked his grey hair in the avenue... Investments would be fine this year he thought to himself. He said good by at his property climbed into his coupe and said good day as his carriage road away. The court would not look at him again. He has won and upon this appeal no one could argue that property construction was the winner today.

New Zealand's high court can be a funny place. Not all are winners when they argue to the point.. Often it can be the plaintiff who wins and the Aaron Coupes of this world seldom do get a positive turn. But for this day Aaron did win the veridic in the High Court of New Zealand

Let us see how this arrangement goes Aaron Peter Coupe

An arrangement was made between the Harbour Construction and Mr Coupe. However it was not completely satisfactory. The horses and offices in trade were not to the Mint satisfaction Aaron was used to and he did protest if was truly unlawful to have to accept such a circumstance without protecting just a little. Even if it was very ungentlemanly for an Auckland resident to do so. These are high times in the New Zealand legal system to NZHC 2828 would just have to wait their term to be free on the mint.
